

I will present a path towards cooling of molecules using a two step solution. The first step is the phase space conserving adiabatic magnetic deceleration of paramagnetic molecules in a supersonic beam. The second step is the application of a single photon cooling technique towards magnetically trapped molecules to reach temperatures in the micro Kelvin range.